Diversity in Research Prize for AddRan Graduate Students

Purpose  The Diversity in Research Prize recognizes one graduate student for excellence in research or creative activity that advances our understanding of issues of diversity, equity, and inclusion. This might include topics dealing with race, ethnicity, religion, gender, sexual identity, class, disability or any other underrepresented group. It might also include research that brings together academic institutions and community organizations to address pressing social issues such as health and education disparities, homelessness, and migration.

Eligibility  The Prize competition is open to all MA, MS, and PhD students in AddRan College.

Award  There will be one award of $1,500.

Application  Application materials must include:
- A 2-page description of the project and an explanation of its significance in advancing our understanding of issues of diversity, equity, and inclusion.
- An updated CV
- A copy of the conference paper, article, thesis, or dissertation described in the proposal
- Submit all materials in a single PDF document to Dr. Peter Worthing (p.worthing@tcu.edu)
- Applications are due by Nov. 1.

Evaluation  The members of the AddRan Research and Creative Activity Committee will review and evaluate the applications. The committee will make recommendations to the Dean, ranking the proposals based on the degree to which they reflect the stated goals of the Prize as well as their overall quality. Notification of awards will take place by December 1.

Reporting  The prize winner will make a presentation on his or her project at a lunch meeting during the following spring semester.
